Media Recommendations

Here's some TV shows and podcasts I've been listening to.

Podcast : "Hey Babe!" – Hosts and comedians Chris Distefano & Sal Vulcano started this pod sharing crazy personal stories and their common experiences living in New York! Very funny and interesting people!

TV Show : "Bridgerton" on Netflix – My college roommates and I are watching this show during our weekly FaceTime calls and we're hooked! It's an "alternate history period drama" about dating, marriage, and family.

Movie : "Palm Springs" on Hulu – This film features past SNL cast member Andy Samberg and it's like a modern version of "Groundhog Day" but with more weddings and drugs. I was pleasantly surprised with the storyline & character developments. Would Recommend!

Insta Throwback

Last January my friend Lauren and I did a three week ROLLER DERBY CAMP.

We went over the basics of the sport, learned terminology, & practiced lots of skills.

I spent most of my time re-learning how to skate HAHA

Talk about getting out of your comfort zone!!!

2021 Goals - Let's Do It!

Whether it has to do with education, physical/mental health, new hobbies, seeking help, or learning to have more fun – everyone has things they want to accomplish this year!

Anonymous submissions

- Go rock climbing outside
- Graduate law school
- Publish my book
- Update the appliances in our home
- Lose a couple pounds and drink more water!
- Start my dog training business!

An advice column from Alloy's POV.

Topic: Second Chances

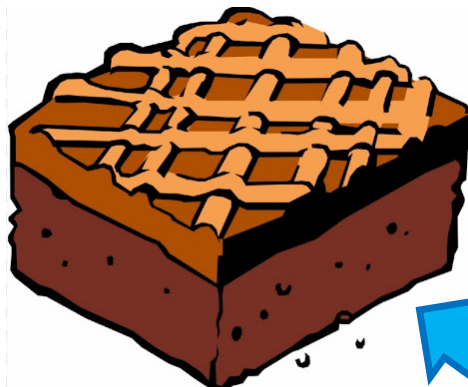

Question: I went on a date and it was kind of awkward but it was fun enough. The person asked me out again but I'm not sure if we have a connection and want to go.

Alloy's Answer:

Great question! I think it's normal to be awkward on 1st dates especially when you might not have hung out in person a bunch beforehand. If you had fun and feel like on a 2nd date you would both relax more then maybe that can lead to better conversations and a better connection. Doesn't hurt to give someone a second chance at a 1st impression. I say go for it!

Stay safe!
